ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE (AI)

For some, AI was the way to get a better grade when we were youngish students and teachers were, well, teachers. Now, and for us all, artificial intelligence means so much more.

What are its promises for our future? What could be its issues and even dangers?

How has society dealt with technology changes in the past? What clues can we gain?

How do “machines” learn? What are some implications for humans if/when machines get “smart” and start doing a larger portion of “the work”?

David Lerner is presenting this General Meeting talk and is anticipating quite an interesting response from attendees.
